

ATTENTION: YOUR RIVER NEEDS YOU!

BECOME A RIVER WARDEN

Welland Rivers Trust are recruiting volunteer groups to adopt a stretch of their local river and conduct regular surveys for wildlife, water quality, invasive species and flooding. Becoming a River Warden is a great way to get outside and learn more about the natural environment where you live.

Anybody can become a River Warden - existing groups include schools, scouts, fishing clubs and local residents. Training and support is provided and surveys take less than one hour to complete a few times a year!

You could become a local champion for your river, understanding its health and supporting restoration work across the Welland Valley. Get involved and make a real difference to your local wildlife and community.
